As parents negotiate these dilemmas, they not only confront conflicting medical guidelines about breastfeeding and solitary infant sleep, but also larger questions about cultural and moral expectations for children and parents, and their relationship with one another.

"Nighttime Breastfeeding: Men and Fathers in Global Perspective" suggests that men are responding to globalization as fathers in creative and unprecedented ways, not only in the West, but also in numerous global locations. This book explores the experiences of infertility and the pursuit and use of assisted reproductive technologies by Thai couples. Though using assisted reproductive technologies is becoming more acceptable in Thai society, access to and choices about such technologies are mediated by inequalities in class position. These shifting patterns of women's and men's private and public identities influence how local social and medical sensibilities influence the practices and meanings of treatment.
